On March 26, 2026, Representative Robert Garcia, ranking member of the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee, sent a certified letter to Mr. William H. Riley of Miami, Florida, requesting that he make himself available for a voluntary transcribed interview regarding the removal, storage, and current location of computers and physical evidence taken from Jeffrey Epstein's Palm Beach mansion in October 2005. The letter carried a response deadline of April 9, 2026 and included a formal preservation notice warning of “adverse legal consequences” for failure to maintain materials. The letter was addressed in the present tense throughout, treated Riley as a living person capable of receiving mail and complying with requests, and was transmitted by certified mail to an address in Miami where, six months earlier, a visitation had been held at Caballero Rivero Woodlawn South funeral home for a man named William Riley, age seventy-nine, of Miami, Florida, who died on Friday, September 27, 2024 and was buried on October 4, 2024, at Our Lady of Mercy Cemetery in Doral. William Henry Riley had been dead for eighteen months when Congress sent him a letter asking where the evidence went.

Mr. William H. Riley

TRANSMITTED BY CERTIFIED MAIL

Dear Mr. Riley:

The Committee on Oversight and Government Reform is investigating matters related to Jeffrey Epstein and his co-conspirators, the horrific crimes he committed, and the circumstances that enabled Epstein to continue his abuse. New information provided by Darren Indyke, Epstein's personal attorney, during his deposition before the Committee on March 19, 2026, leads the Committee to believe that you may possess evidence and/or information that will advance our investigation.¹ We request that you cooperate with the Committee's investigation and make yourself available for a transcribed interview with Committee staff, as well as preserve all relevant materials in your possession.

When Palm Beach police raided Epstein's home in 2007, three computers owned by Epstein were conspicuously missing.² In search of these computers, a federal grand jury issued a subpoena to your private investigations firm, Riley Kiraly, seeking information about the devices, but it appears no computers were ever produced.³ Despite this, Mr. Indyke confirmed during his deposition that, at some point, private investigators possessed hard drives from Epstein's computers and suggested they were never turned over to law enforcement.⁴

Moreover, the Committee is aware that your firm was retained by Jeffrey Epstein's lawyers in connection with his 2007 Florida case.⁵ According to a 2005 memo you wrote to Roy

Black, your colleague Paul Lavery removed "items of potential evidentiary value" from Epstein's Palm Beach home at Black's direction, including three computers.⁶ The memo also indicates that Mr. Lavery turned over this evidence to you to take custody of the materials and store them on Epstein's behalf.⁷ Almost two years after Lavery took the items, you emailed Epstein and several of his lawyers saying, "the computers and paperwork I took from Jeff's house" are "locked in storage."⁸ Additional documents discussing payments for storage units raise questions about the possession and location of this evidence.⁹

Given this background, the Committee requests that you make yourself available for a transcribed interview to provide insight into the contents, removal, storage, and location of materials removed from Mr. Epstein's Palm Beach home. The Committee also seeks information regarding the reason for the removal of these materials, the potential withholding of these materials from law enforcement, and any other information regarding the activities and crimes of Jeffrey Epstein and any of his co-conspirators. Due to the urgency and gravity of this matter, we ask that you provide a response to the Committee's request by April 9, 2026.

Additionally, this letter serves as a formal notice to preserve and not alter, delete, destroy, or otherwise dispose of any and all documents, communications, materials, and electronically stored information (ESI) that may be relevant to Jeffrey Epstein or the Committee's investigation. Please note that failure to preserve these materials may result in adverse legal consequences, particularly in the event that such materials are later sought pursuant to compulsory process. This preservation obligation applies broadly to materials in your possession, custody, or control, and includes both physical and digital records, including but not limited to:

OBITUARY

William Riley

FEBRUARY 27, 1945 - SEPTEMBER 27, 2024

IN THE CARE OF

Caballero Rivero Woodlawn South & Woodlawn Park Cemetery South

William Riley, age 79, of Miami, Florida passed away on Friday, September 27, 2024. William was born in Miami, Florida.

The obituary is four sentences long and it does not mention his career, his clients, or the storage units.

I want to be precise about what I am documenting here, because precision is what this entire investigation has demanded from the start, and because the documented record on William Henry Riley is vast enough to drown in if you are not careful about what each piece of paper actually says. Riley was a former Miami police officer who co-owned Riley Kiraly Investigations with his partner Stephen Kiraly, also a former Miami police officer. Their firm was based in Florida, most recently in Pinellas County, where I lived for most of my childhood (Surprisingly enough, I know people who knew him personally). Riley was retained through the law firm of Black Srebnick Kornspan & Stumpf, specifically through criminal defense attorney Roy Black, to work on behalf of Jeffrey Epstein during the 2005–2006 Palm Beach police investigation and the federal proceedings that followed.

He was not a peripheral figure in this story, either. He was, based on the documents that now exist in the public record through the DOJ's Epstein Files Transparency Act archive, the last known custodian of evidence that the Department of Justice's own Office of Professional Responsibility later concluded was "potentially critical" to the prosecution of Jeffrey Epstein, and whose absence may have altered the trajectory of the case that defined federal failure for a generation.

WHAT THE MEMO SAYS HE TOOK

On or around October 9, 2005, Riley authored a memorandum to Roy Black, now indexed as EFTA01733753 in Dataset 10 of the DOJ Epstein Library, documenting that another private investigator named Paul Lavery had visited Epstein's Palm Beach mansion at Black's direction and removed what Riley's memo described as "items of potential evidentiary value." This removal occurred less than two weeks before the Palm Beach Police Department executed a search warrant on the same property, a raid led by Detective Joseph Recarey under Police Chief Michael Reiter that had been building for months based on statements from dozens of minor victims. When police entered the house, they found monitors and printers and peripherals, but the computers were conspicuously absent. They found security cameras mounted throughout the residence, but none connected to recording equipment and hanging file folders with their contents removed. The items were gone because Lavery had already taken them and delivered them to Riley's office, where Riley inventoried them and placed them in storage.

Epstein hid trove of evidence from investigators, documents suggest The late sex offender Jeffrey Epstein appeared to have hidden a trove of potential evidence of his crimes for more than a decade, according to recent documents released by the Department of Justice.

First major U.S. outlet to report the Riley memo and evidence removal operation in full.

The inventory documented in that memo, as reported by ABC News on February 25, 2026 and The Telegraph on February 22, 2026, and confirmed in Representative Garcia's March 26, 2026 letter, included more than one hundred items. Three desktop computers — two Dells and one Hewlett-Packard — one of which had been previously hardwired to the mansion's surveillance camera system. Twenty-nine bound telephone directories, a three-page listing of nearby masseuses, and more than ten photographs of nude or partially nude women, at least two bearing handwritten messages, including one photograph inscribed with the words "You better never forget about me" and signed "Class of 2005. More than a dozen items of sexual paraphernalia, Ponca Post Five pieces of women's underwear, more than forty mainly pornographic VHS tapes, pornographic magazines with titles including "Barely Legal" and "Purely 18." DVDs that ABC News described as "eroticising teenagers," an 8mm video cassette containing footage of someone in a shower and a woman in lingerie, two books — "Compleat Slave: Creating and Living an Erotic Dominant/Submissive Lifestyle" and "Training with Miss Abernathy: A Workbook for Erotic Slaves and Their Owners," Epstein's Florida concealed carry permit, a Harvard University identification card, a 2005 calendar, greeting cards, letters, laboratory results, and more than two thousand dollars in cash. All of it removed from the residence of a man who was under active investigation for the serial sexual abuse of minors recruited from five Palm Beach County high schools, all of it removed before police could find it, all of it handed to William Riley for what the memo called "inventory and safekeeping purposes."

In a 2007 interview with federal agents, Paul Lavery stated that he | “took the items that were given to me” and delivered them to Riley’s office. He said he had | “never seen the equipment again.”

THE GRAND JURY TRIED TO GET IT BACK

In June 2007, a federal grand jury issued subpoenas — indexed as EFTA00179036 in the DOJ archive — to Riley personally and to Riley Kiraly Investigations as custodian of records, ordering the production of all computer equipment and electronic storage media removed from Epstein's Palm Beach residence, any computers owned by Epstein, and all records documenting the relationship between Epstein and the investigators who removed the material. Riley's grand jury appearance was initially scheduled for July 10, 2007, then moved to July 17. He did not appear so, that same day, Epstein's attorneys filed a motion to quash the subpoenas indexed as EFTA00178967, arguing that the attempt to recover the evidence was “simply the most recent of a series of highly intrusive and unusual attempts to acquire highly personal and/or privileged information” about their client. Roy Black told the court in a sealed motion that “without disclosing any work done by Mr. Riley or his firm on Mr. Epstein's behalf and at my direction, any actions thereafter taken by him or the firm were taken in connection with the legal representation of Mr. Epstein.”

The argument was attorney-client privilege, and it worked the way it has always worked in this case — as a wall between the documented record of what happened to children and anyone capable of doing something about it.

The same month, a computer forensics expert named David Kleiman contacted a Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office deputy requesting the use of the agency's hard drive duplication device. Kleiman said he had been hired by Roy Black to make three copies of each of the three computers, and the job needed to be done immediately with someone standing by. The deputy declined because the equipment was unreliable and reported the contact to the FBI. Riley later confirmed in a 2009 email that

"Roy Black directed that the computer drives be cloned and he would have the results of that effort. The cloning was done by a forensic specialist, Dave Kleiman."

Kleiman died in April of 2013.

An FBI agent filed a sealed court document attesting that items

"were purposely removed from Mr. Epstein's home in anticipation of an execution of a search warrant" and that those items may contain vital evidence, including surveillance camera footage and

"electronically stored message logs which could be further evidence of Mr. Epstein's intent to travel to engage in sexual activity with teenagers he recruited from five Palm Beach County high schools."

AUSA Marie Villafaña, who had drafted a fifty-three-page, sixty-count federal indictment against Epstein and an eightytwo-page prosecution memo, told the DOJ's Office of Professional Responsibility that "had the evidence on the missing computers been what we suspected it was, it would have put this case completely to bed."

The indictment was never filed. When Epstein pleaded guilty to state charges under the non-prosecution agreement brokered by U.S.

Attorney Alexander Acosta in 2008, the grand jury subpoena directed at Riley was withdrawn.

The evidence was never produced.

with one of Epstein's defense attorneys about it. Sloman told OPR during his interview that he "vaguely" remembered the computer issue. The documentary evidence confirms that he had at least some contemporaneous knowledge of the issue—when asked by Villafañá whether to put off a September 12, 2007 hearing on the litigation, he told her to do so. Finally, as noted previously, the FBI co-case agent proposed at a meeting with USAO personnel that the USAO wait until the litigation was resolved before pursuing plea negotiations.

Contemporaneous records show that Acosta was likely aware before the NPA was signed of the USAO's efforts to obtain custody of Epstein's computers and that after the NPA was signed, he was informed about the use of legal process for obtaining the computer equipment. The NPA itself provides that "the federal . . . investigation will be suspended, and all pending [legal process] will be held in abeyance," that Epstein will withdraw his "motion to intervene and to quash certain [legal process]," and, further, that the parties would "maintain . . . evidence subject to [legal process] that have been issued, and including certain computer equipment, inviolate" until the NPA's terms had been fully satisfied, at which point the legal process would be "deemed withdrawn." (Emphasis added.) Acosta's numerous edits on the NPA's final draft suggest that he gave it a close read, and OPR expects that Acosta would not have approved the agreement without understanding what legal process his office was agreeing to withdraw, or why the only type of evidence specified was "certain computer equipment." In addition, Acosta told OPR that he worked closely with Sloman and Menchel, consulted with them, and relied on their counsel about the case. Among other things, Acosta said he discussed with them concerns about the law and the evidentiary issues presented by a federal criminal trial. Therefore, although it is possible that Sloman made the decision to postpone the hearing concerning the USAO's efforts to obtain the computer equipment without consulting Acosta, once Acosta reviewed the draft NPA, Acosta was on notice of the existence of and the ongoing litigation concerning Epstein's missing computer equipment.

Villafañá knew where the computers were; litigation over the demand for the equipment was already underway; there was good reason to believe the computers contained relevant—and potentially critical—information; and it was clear Epstein did not want the contents of his computers disclosed. Nothing in the available record reveals that the USAO benefitted from abandoning pursuit of this evidence when they did, or that there was any significant consideration of the costs and benefits of forgoing the litigation to obtain production of the computers.²⁵⁴ Instead, the USAO agreed to postpone and ultimately to abandon its efforts to obtain evidence that could have significantly changed Acosta's decision to resolve the federal investigation with a state guilty plea or led to additional significant federal charges. By agreeing to postpone the litigation, the USAO gave away leverage that might have caused the defense to come to an agreement much earlier and on terms more favorable to the government. The USAO ultimately agreed to a term in the NPA that permanently ended the government's ability to obtain possible evidence of significant crimes and did so with apparently little serious consideration of the potential cost.

²⁵⁴ If the USAO had significant concerns about its likelihood of prevailing, postponing the litigation to use it as leverage in the negotiations might have been strategically reasonable. Lourie suggested in his response to his interview transcript that the court might have precluded production of the computers. However, OPR saw no evidence indicating that Villafañá or her supervisors were concerned that the court would do so, and Villafañá had consulted with the Department's subject matter experts before initiating her action to obtain the equipment.

The OPR concluded the missing computers contained "potentially critical" evidence and faulted Acosta for agreeing to the plea deal without securing them.

“I HAVE THEM LOCKED IN STORAGE”

The plea deal did not end Riley’s custody of the evidence. It extended it by over a decade until August 23, 2009 — one month after Epstein’s release from his Palm Beach County jail sentence — Riley emailed Epstein’s attorney Robert D. Critton Jr. and other members of Epstein’s legal team. That email, indexed as EFTA00884246, reads in the relevant portion:

“Over the weekend I learned that plaintiff’s counsel are looking to get from me the computers and paperwork I took from Jeff’s house prior to the Search Warrant. I have them locked in storage and would like to know what to do with them. They are no longer needed in the criminal case, I assume.”

Riley confirmed in a follow-up communication that he would continue to hold the materials “in a safe and secure location.” Critton wrote back instructing Riley that if at any time he was “unable to maintain possession of those materials or have any concern whatsoever that Mr. Epstein’s possession may be compromised in any manner, please advise me immediately such that we can take the necessary actions to protect and preserve those materials as is required in the Non-Prosecution Agreement.”

Critton died in 2020.

On September 7, 2010, email correspondence indexed as EFTA02422842 documents communication between Riley and Epstein regarding the ongoing storage arrangement, including payments Epstein was making to maintain the storage units. Billing records from Riley Kiraly — indexed as EFTA01117337 — show invoices from the firm addressed to Epstein’s attorneys spanning several years with recurring charges for storage. Credit card records show Epstein made monthly payments to a facility called “Uncle Bob’s” at more than $370 per month from at least 2003 until sometime between 2015 and 2016, and to a separate Royal Palm Beach storage facility at approximately $140 per month, with payments continuing until 2019, the year Epstein died. The Palm Beach Post reported on February 25, 2026 that Epstein rented at least six storage units across the country the majority in Florida, with at least one located five minutes from his Manhattan townhouse. No federal agency has confirmed searching any of them.

Bob,

Over the weekend I learned that plaintiff's counsel are looking to get from me the computers and paperwork I took from Jeff's house prior to the Search Warrant.

I have them locked in storage and would like to know what to do with them.

They are no longer needed in the criminal case, I assume.

Is it possible to give you these items for your review and safekeeping or give it to Darren Indyke or back to Jeff, etc.?

I have attached my inventory and some of the photos of the items I have. Roy Black directed that the computers drives be cloned and he would have the results of that effort. The cloning was done by a forensic specialist, Dave Kleiman.

Let me know ASAP.

And then, on April 18, 2011, just after midnight, Jeffrey Epstein sent William Riley an email that read:

“Before I call Trump, with regard vrginina,, are there any other alternatives.”

That misspelling is actually in the original and no reply from Riley appears in the released files. The email was confirmed as authentic by multiple outlets following the DOJ’s January 30, 2026 release of approximately 3.5 million pages under the Epstein Files Transparency Act, and was reported by Raw Story, The New Republic, Yahoo News, The Times of London, and others. The reference to “vrginina” is widely interpreted as referring to Virginia Giuffre, the woman who was sixteen years old when Ghislaine Maxwell recruited her from the locker room at Mar-a-Lago and drove her to Epstein’s Palm Beach mansion, two miles away, where Maxwell told her that Epstein had “been waiting to meet you,” and where, in Giuffre’s consistent account across depositions, FBI interviews, and her posthumous memoir, Maxwell undressed her and both Epstein and Maxwell sexually assaulted her during their first encounter. What the email establishes in the documented record is that Epstein, in 2011, was communicating directly with his private investigator about Giuffre and about Trump in the same sentence, and that he was weighing whether to call Trump as one of several “alternatives” in whatever matter he was managing at that moment.

Although, no evidence in the released portion of the files confirms that such a call took place.

'I thought you said not to involve Donald,' Epstein told in email

From CNN's Aaron Blake

Three weeks before the Riley email, Maxwell told Epstein: "I thought you said not to involve Donald."

That email sits in the same document production as an email chain from March 22, 2011, in which Epstein wrote to Nicholas L. Ribis — the former president of Trump Hotels & Casino Resorts — about

“the girl in the new papers that has made all this trouble,” stating she “said she worked at Mar-a-Lago when she was 15, in 1998. I’m virtually positive that is a lie. It was when she was 17, in 2000.”

When Maxwell was copied on the exchange, she replied:

“I thought you said not to involve Donald.”

She then pivoted immediately to strategy, advising Epstein to obtain the victim’s employment records from Mar-a-Lago because

“she had to be at least 16 to be in full-time employment” and because

“that alone would kill her allegation.”

This is the documented voice of the network in 2011 — five years after the Palm Beach investigation, three years after the plea deal that shielded everyone, and a decade before Maxwell’s conviction on five federal counts including sex trafficking of minors on December 29, 2021.

THE OPERATION AROUND HIM

Riley did not operate in isolation. The documented record of private investigators deployed on Epstein’s behalf during the 2005–2006 Palm Beach investigation describes an operation that was systematic, aggressive, and directed at every person who posed a threat to Epstein's freedom — victims, their families, the police, and eventually the FBI itself.

Palm Beach police reports identify at least three distinct private investigators working simultaneously on Epstein's behalf during the investigation. One contacted Epstein's former house manager to “meet with him to ascertain what he was going to tell the police.”

That same investigator made telephone contact with accusers

“either just before or after a police investigator spoke with them.”

A second investigator was observed

“photographing his family and chasing visitors who come to the house” outside the home of one accuser's father. One week after being identified, a person claiming to represent Epstein approached that accuser directly with a message:

“Those who help him will be compensated and those who hurt him will be dealt with.”

A third investigator's vehicle was identified by police after a parent called multiple times reporting surveillance, and the same vehicle later “ran the mother of the same accuser off the road.”

Michael Fisten, a former Miami-Dade police sergeant who was hired by victims' attorney Brad Edwards in 2009 to investigate Epstein, described the Epstein PI operation in interviews with CNN and the Daily Beast:

“They were former Miami cops. He paid an extremely large retainer to them and all their job to do was to follow the girls around and intimidate them.”

The operation did not stop at victims. According to an October 2019 FBI interview with Palm Beach Police Chief Michael Reiter — the summary of which was released as part of the DOJ Epstein files — Epstein’s investigators “started to harass him,” went through his trash, and he was told his safety was in danger. Reiter kept investigative files on a separate hard drive locked in a safe because of the threats. In July 2025, Rolling Stone reported that multiple federal law enforcement officials confirmed the same tactics were directed at FBI special agents working the Epstein case. One official told the outlet:

“They put surveillance on them, they tailed them, pulled their trash, they hired private PIs to investigate the investigators.”

One special agent moved to a gated community to escape the constant harassment.

Then-U.S. Attorney Alexander Acosta later described the defense effort in a 2011 letter as

“a year-long assault on the prosecution and prosecutors,” writing that he used

“the word assault intentionally, as the defense in this case was more aggressive than any which I, or the prosecutors in my office, had previously encountered.”

Palm Beach police reports also accused Riley specifically of representing himself as a police officer while conducting a witness interview on November 21, 2005, in Orange Park, Florida. Roy Black issued a press release on July 27, 2006, through PR Newswire, denying the allegation and releasing Riley’s own notes from the interview as evidence, calling the accusation “inaccurate” and describing Riley and Kiraly as “seasoned investigators who adhere to the highest professional standards.” Riley’s notes documented the interaction:

“My name is Bill Riley, and this is my partner Steve Kiraly. We are investigators from Miami working on behalf of Jeff Epstein. We’re here just to learn the truth.”

The accuser became hostile and told them to leave. Alan Dershowitz, who was assisting Epstein’s defense, later acknowledged directing Riley and Kiraly to investigate a teenage accuser, telling a Palm Beach detective in 2006 that the investigators “were instructed beforehand to take a verbatim statement”

because they feared the accuser,

“an accomplished drama student, might try to mislead them.”

Dershowitz enclosed the accuser’s MySpace page and suggested she was pursuing Epstein for money.

Dershowitz said on Wednesday that he was right to send the letter. “The prosecutors found her to be non-credible,” he said in an email. “The job of a defense lawyer is to provide all relevant information regarding the lack of credibility of alleged witnesses against his or her client. Our legal team did what all good defense lawyers should do.”

In a statement following the release of police files, Roy Black, an attorney for the investigators, said: “Mr Riley and his partner, Mr Kiraly, are seasoned investigators who adhere to the highest professional standards and I have every confidence that they conducted themselves appropriately when they interviewed this witness”.

Black called Riley a “seasoned investigator who adhered to the highest professional standards.”

Black died July 21, 2025.

THREE MEN NAMED WILLIAM RILEY AND WHY IT IS IMPORTANT

This investigation has required me to maintain surgical precision about which William Riley appears where, because three men with that name have been discussed in connection with the Epstein case, and the conflation of those identities has produced documented harm to the public record that I am now going to lay out with the specificity this series demands.

The first is William Henry Riley — middle initial H., born February 27, 1945, in Miami, Florida. This is the private investigator at Riley Kiraly, the man who authored the 2005 memo to Roy Black and whose photos appear on pages 37 and 43 of EFTA00133349 in Dataset 9 of the DOJ Epstein Library, as confirmed by Snopes on February 18, 2026. This is the man the House Oversight Committee addressed its March 2026 letter to and the man who died on September 27, 2024.

The second is William Kyle Riley — a helicopter pilot from Georgia, approximately seventy-six years old, the adoptive father of a man named Sascha Riley, born Manuel Sascha Barros who, as we all know, came forward publicly in late 2025 through Lisa Noelle Voldeng's Substack "Outlaws of Chivalry" alleging that their adoptive father trafficked them as a child in connection with Epstein. William Kyle Riley does not appear in the released batches of Epstein EFTA files. The documentary presence of a "William Riley" in Epstein case records refers to William Henry Riley, the Miami PI, and was erroneously treated by social media users and apparently by Voldeng herself as corroboration of Sascha Riley's allegations about their adoptive father. It is not.

The third is William John Riley — a former FBI special agent who headed the property crimes unit at the Bureau's D.C. headquarters, a Bronze Star recipient for Korean War service, who died of a heart attack on March 21, 2011, at his home in Wailea, on the Hawaiian island of Maui, at the age of eighty-two. His obituary ran in the Washington Post and Substack researcher Ellie Leonard, in her January 21, 2026 article "My Findings on Sascha Riley," identified this man as the Riley Kiraly PI, writing that she had found "William 'Bill' Riley, the former FBI agent and investigator hired by Epstein to follow and harass young survivors during the 2006– 2008 case," and that "according to the Washington Post he'd died in 2011."

This identification is incorrect.

The Riley Kiraly PI was William Henry Riley, a former Miami police officer, not a former FBI agent, and he did not die in Hawaii in 2011 — he died in Miami in 2024. The biographical details Leonard attributed to the Epstein PI — Bronze Star, Korean War, wife Janice Sue Benninger Riley, children William Edgar Riley and Nancy Shannon Okeson — belong to the Washington Post obituary subject, a different person who lived and died in Hawaii.

Trigger Warning: I do not describe most of the things from Sascha's testimony, but there are small descriptions of violence in this article.

I will reference Sascha Riley as their preferred pronouns, they/us/we/y'all, though they are described in these witness accounts as a "boy."

In early November a woman reached out to me on Signal with a simple message:

"Hello. Is this line secure and active?"

I told her yes, and she said she had a story that would be unlike any other. When was I available to talk? My son has soccer practice tonight. If you're okay with me chatting in my

I told her yes, and she said she had a story that would be unlike any other. When was I available to talk? My son has soccer practice tonight. If you're okay with me chatting in my car then I'll probably have an hour or so. She said it was fine. I asked her how she found me, and she said a "good jedi stateside" had referred her to my Substack. I grabbed a fresh cup of coffee, dropped my kid off at practice, and waited for her call.

And she wasn't wrong—I'd never heard a story like this.

But I also do my homework. I research. I dig into background checks, genealogy, court records, marriage licenses, birth and death certificates, and military records. I look for patterns and inconsistencies. I listen to testimony and see whether it lines up or conflicts. And I do all of this because I hope that in the long run it can not only protect and spotlight survivors of sexual abuse, but also bring them to a point of justice and closure. And as much as a story of survival helps further this mission, a false lead can take away from the credibility of the hundreds of survivors we know about in cases like Jeffrey Epstein's. So I'm very, very careful about what I hear, what I see, what I say, what I write, and the messages I push forward on platforms like Substack and social media.

Back to the story.

The call lasted longer than soccer practice, and I found myself back at my computer taking furious notes. A farm. Killing. Children. Oklahoma. A secret adoption. Snuff films. Her voice rose and fell as she laid out the details, and I got the feeling I was the first person to know. In hindsight, I may not have been, but in the moment it felt exciting. I was a new journalist and people rarely told me their secrets.

She'd moved Sascha out of the country for their own safety. These were stories of such magnitude, nobody in their right mind would sit and wait for a knock on their door from authorities. No one could expect a simple police department or even the FBI to do their job, not when you're talking about a sex-trafficking ring exponentially worse than the one described in the Epstein files. Not when you're giving witness testimony of child murders at the hands of the President of the United States and his friends. Certainly no one at the DOJ would touch this with a ten-foot pole.

The woman was sincere, and in the moment I felt she believed Sascha's story, so I did my best to honor her and do my homework. Because if it were true, this would be the worst case of child abuse in U.S. history, not to mention the biggest scandal if it involved Donald Trump. But if it weren't, well, I supposed it would just go away.

I started to search, sending the woman my questions along the way. It had all taken place mostly in Oklahoma, Sascha said, but I could find no record of Epstein or Trump ever visiting Oklahoma, nor did they have friends or colleagues who lived there. Trump had spent more time there since campaigning for president, but prior to 2015 he'd never visited, at least on the record. "Yeah, I know that's strange," the woman said, "but they were adamant that's where it took place." I wrote it down.

The four words that make my blood boil here are “the woman was sincere.” Ellie, darling, you should maybe do a little more research before writing things that elevate sociopaths. Also, it is important that you check your facts before posting something against another individual especially with the platform you have built for yourself. Unfortunately, the William Riley error discredits all of your work on this person, and that is important regardless of whether you believe Sascha or not. Sorry.

I found William “Bill” Riley, the former FBI agent and investigator hired by Epstein to follow and harass young survivors during the 2006-2008 case that ended with his “sweetheart deal,” led by prosecutor Alex Acosta. But this was a William John Riley, and according to the Washington Post he’d died in 2011. This Bill Riley was a Bronze Star in the Korean War, had been married to Janice Sue Benninger Riley since 1963, lived in New York State, and had two children, William Edgar Riley and Nancy Shannon Okeson. He worked as a private investigator for the Office of Kiraly and Riley PIs.

Leonard’s research was rigorous in many respects but incorrectly identified the Epstein PI as “William John Riley” based on an unrelated Washington Post obituary.

Lisa Noelle Voldeng, who published the Sascha Riley audio recordings on November 23–24, 2025, and who presented evidence including to researcher Ellie Leonard, appears to have treated the name match between William Kyle Riley and the William Riley in Epstein documents as evidence linking Sascha’s father to the case. As Laura Robinson documented on her Substack on January 26, 2026, this was

“the single corroborating thing, outside of available information that Riley is a real person, that he really was adopted, that tied any of Riley’s claims to the Epstein files.”

When the conflation was identified, that evidentiary basis collapsed.

Voldeng told Snopes she was “not a journalist” and had “never worked as a journalist,” describing herself as a CEO and industry analyst forecaster. She dropped her promotion of Sascha Riley when outside scrutiny increased, as I documented in Part I of this series. The mechanism of the conflation is straightforward: William Riley is a common name, the Epstein documents contain a William Riley, Sascha Riley’s adoptive father is named William Riley, and in the absence of middle names and precise identification, the public treated one as proof of the other.

✓ Subscribed

I have spent weeks building the documented record of what William Henry Riley did, what he held, and where the chain of custody stands as of the date I am publishing this piece, and what that record establishes is something that I do not think the public has fully absorbed yet. The evidence removed from Epstein's Palm Beach mansion in October 2005 — three computers including one that recorded his home surveillance system, twenty-nine telephone directories, photographs of nude women signed by what appear to be recent high school graduates, sex-trafficking training manuals, and more than one hundred other items — was held in storage units paid for by Jeffrey Epstein for more than a decade. That evidence was subpoenaed by a federal grand jury but that subpoena was quashed. The evidence was never produced and the DOJ's own Office of Professional Responsibility concluded in 2020 that it was "potentially critical" and that "nothing in the available record reveals that the USAO benefitted from abandoning pursuit of this evidence when they did."

And now, every principal in the chain of custody who could testify about what happened to that evidence and where it went is dead.

Jeffrey Epstein died on August 10, 2019. David Kleiman, the forensics expert who cloned the hard drives, died in April 2013. Robert D. Critton Jr., the Epstein attorney who directed Riley to preserve the materials in a "safe and secure location" and who wrote that he should be notified immediately if "possession may be compromised in any manner," died in 2020. Roy Black, the criminal defense attorney who directed Paul Lavery to remove the evidence and retained Riley Kiraly to store it, died on July 21, 2025, at his home in Coral Gables, WLRN of what his law partner described as a serious illness. And William Henry Riley, the last known custodian of the physical evidence, died on September 27, 2024, in Miami, at the age of seventy-nine, and was buried at Our Lady of Mercy Cemetery three days before his obituary went up on Dignity

Memorial, four sentences long, with no mention of his career, his clients, his firm, or the storage units.

Three people in the documented chain remain alive and theoretically capable of providing information. Stephen Kiraly, Riley's business partner, was reached by phone by ABC News and by reporters from The Telegraph who approached him at his Florida home, but he declined all comment, stating:

"I apologize, but under state law I can't divulge any information without written consent from the client or his estate."

Paul Lavery, who physically removed the items from Epstein's home, has not responded to any media or congressional requests. Darren Indyke, Epstein's personal attorney and co-executor of his estate, testified before the House Oversight Committee on March 19, 2026 and confirmed that he was aware hard drives were in possession of private investigators and that the material was "likely never turned over to law enforcement." The committee has requested transcribed interviews with all three private investigators by April 9, 2026, just three days from the publishing of this piece.

One of them has been dead for eighteen months and no one in Congress appears to have noticed.

Every person who directed, executed, or oversaw the removal and storage of Epstein's evidence from his Palm Beach home is now dead except Stephen Kiraly, Paul Lavery, and Darren Indyke.

The question that remains is not an abstraction and it is not rhetorical. Where are the computers, the twenty-nine telephone directories, the photographs signed "Class of 2005," and the contents of at least six storage units that Jeffrey Epstein rented and paid for across the United States, the majority in Florida, for more than sixteen years. The FBI has not confirmed searching any of them. Copies of two of the three hard drives were eventually recovered — an FBI forensic analyst testified about them at Ghislaine Maxwell’s 2021 sex trafficking trial — but the originals and all physical materials appear to have never been located by law enforcement. The copied drives contained photographs of Epstein and Maxwell and a job advertisement written by “GMax” seeking a massage therapist for Epstein’s Palm Beach home, but no surveillance footage and no blackmail material was disclosed from the copies. The FBI issued a statement that it had “found no evidence” of abuse recordings despite the fact that the original computer connected to the surveillance system was never recovered.

RANKING MEMBER ROBERT GARCIA DEMANDS ANSWERS ON HARD DRIVES REMOVED FROM EPSTEIN RESIDENCE

Washington, D.C. — Rep. Robert Garcia, Ranking Member of the Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, wrote to three private investigators who were contracted by Epstein’s legal team in Florida. During a deposition last week before the Committee, Epstein’s personal attorney, Darren Indyke, confirmed Epstein’s hard drives had been obtained by private investigators. In the letters, the Ranking Member requests each individual sit for an interview before the Committee, and to preserve everything the investigators may possess from Epstein’s home. The full list of items that the private investigators removed from Epstein’s home can be viewed here. These private investigators, who worked for Epstein’s lawyers, may hold key evidence never provided to law enforcement. The letters can be viewed here, here, and here.

“It’s stunning that Jeffrey Epstein’s computers and hard drives were in the possession of Epstein’s private investigators and may never have been seen by any law enforcement agency. This information, discovered by Oversight Democrats during the deposition of Epstein’s personal attorney Darren Indyke, is critical as we continue our search for the truth. Oversight Democrats are working to access these hard drives and items and speak directly with the private investigators. We will identify every co-conspirator who shielded Epstein and hold them accountable,” said Ranking Member Robert Garcia.

In the letters, Ranking Member Garcia wrote, “The Committee on Oversight and Government Reform is investigating matters related to Jeffrey Epstein and his co-conspirators, the horrific crimes he committed, and the circumstances that enabled Epstein to continue his abuse. New information provided by Darren Indyke, Epstein’s personal attorney, during his deposition before the Committee on March 19, 2026, leads the Committee to believe that you may possess evidence and/or information that will advance our investigation. We request that you cooperate with the Committee’s investigation and make yourself available for a transcribed interview with Committee staff, as well as preserve all relevant materials in your possession.”

Garcia sent letters to Riley, Kiraly, and Lavery. Riley had been dead for eighteen months.

WHAT THE DOCUMENTED RECORD ACTUALLY CONNECTS

I am going to state what the documented record establishes about William Henry Riley's role in this story and I am going to stop exactly where the documents stop, because that is what this series does and because the facts, laid out without embellishment, are severe enough.

Riley was retained by Epstein's defense attorney to take custody of evidence removed from Epstein's home before police could find it. He stored that evidence for years, possibly over a decade. He was in direct email communication with Epstein about the storage arrangements and about Epstein's ongoing legal concerns, including, on April 18, 2011, an email in which Epstein raised the subject of Trump and Virginia in the same sentence. He was subpoenaed by a federal grand jury and never complied. His firm invoiced Epstein's legal team for years of recurring storage charges. The evidence he held — specifically the computer connected to Epstein's home surveillance cameras — was identified by prosecutors as potentially decisive to the case. The non-prosecution agreement that ended the federal investigation required preservation of this evidence, and Epstein's attorneys ensured Riley maintained it, but it was never turned over to any law enforcement agency. The 2020 OPR report documented all of this and faulted the prosecutors who let it go.

Riley appears in EFTA00133349 at pages 28, 37, and 43, with pages 37 and 43 confirmed by Snopes as containing his photographs. He appears as a witness in Epstein v. Rothstein (Florida 15th Circuit Court, 2009). He is referenced in the SDNY investigation file for Giuffre v. Maxwell (2015) and Virginia Giuffre's testimony mentions him. Nadia Marcinkova — one of Epstein's alleged co-conspirators — invoked the Fifth Amendment when asked about Riley in a deposition. Riley's own deposition was taken in Epstein v. Rothstein and Epstein recommended Riley as a PI to attorney David Schoen by email. The documented footprint is that of someone who was embedded in Epstein's legal defense infrastructure for years, who held material that could have changed the outcome of the most consequential sex trafficking prosecution of the century, and who took the location of that material to his grave at Our Lady of Mercy Cemetery in Doral on October 4, 2024, while Congress spent another seventeen months working up the nerve to send a letter.

This is what The Machine looks like when you follow the paper and not the social media noise or the conflated names and unverified allegations and viral threads that treat a common surname as proof of a connection. The paper, the memos with EFTA numbers, the emails with timestamps, and the subpoenas that were quashed and the evidence that was never produced and the people who are now dead who were the only ones who knew where it went. This is the part of the story that does not go viral because it is not a name you can screenshot and a face you can circle in red and a claim you can post with a fire emoji. It is a storage unit in Palm Beach County paid for by a dead sex trafficker, managed by a dead private investigator, directed by a dead defense attorney, documented by a dead forensics expert, and overseen by a dead intermediary attorney, and the only people left who might know what is inside it are a retired PI in Pinellas County who says state law prevents him from talking and a PI in Hialeah who has not returned a phone call from anyone.

The investigation continues with Part XXV next and you aren't going to want to miss this one.

Since The Machine series started, the most common thing in my inbox isn't a tip or a document — it's a question.
